"Our 2009 conference will focus on the intersecting roles of the private, the not for profit and the public sectors in global food security. Now is the time to encourage the private sector - from large multi-nationals, to smaller companies and individual farmers - to make a significant difference to food production in developing countries, in partnership with governments and the not for profit sector."

Background

Some technologies produced for the developed world flourish in the developing world. The most obvious recent example is the mobile phone which has been readily adopted around the world with such significant impact. But agricultural technologies that have taken hold in wealthier economies often don't find their way to poorer countries.

Given that the private sector now does half of the world's agricultural research and development, and some innovations like Roundup and cheap power sources are rapidly spreading to the small farmers of poorer nations, why isn't more private agricultural R&D reaching them?

This year's Crawford Fund Annual Conference seeks to explore ways in which the private sector can engage in international agricultural research, development and extension to the benefit of the rural poor. It tackles the longstanding problem of the persistent failure of the private sector to develop and introduce agricultural products, technologies and services so badly needed in the poorest developing countries. This failure is magnified when you consider the benefit that could flow to poor farmers if there was a shift to poorer nations in the overwhelming emphasis of private R&D investment in seeds, animal health products, fertiliser and other technology inputs from developed country markets.

We have called on a group of outstanding international and national specialists who come from the private, not-for-profit, philanthropic and public research sectors to consider the key issues across agriculture and what it means for international agricultural research.

NEW CONFERENCE STRUCTURE IN 2009

After some 15 years of Crawford Fund conferences and following feedback from previous years' events, the program for the 2009 Crawford Fund conference has been changed to provide opportunities for additional delegates, networking and impact.

The event will involve the traditional Parliamentary one-day conference, a conference dinner and a Parliamentary breakfast. Each will involve new speakers and additional opportunities for knowledge, feedback and networking.

The one day event will include an extended panel session which will be structured along the lines of a "QandA" with a strong chairing role being envisaged, to allow for additional opportunities for questions and discussions.

The Hon Bob McMullan MP
Parliamentary Secretary for International Development
Assistance

The year 2009 is the 25th anniversary of the death of Sir John Crawford. Accordingly, the event will be marked by a Memorial Address by a leading figure in international development prior to a conference dinner. The subject and content of the lecture is left to the discretion of the chosen speaker but it is expected that it will be on a major issue of international development. In this inaugural year, The Hon. Bob McMullan MP, Parliamentary Secretary for International Development Assistance, has kindly agreed to present the Address.

Our usual invitation-only speakers' breakfast for MP's will be opened to the conference delegates and involve speakers who are not part of the one day Parliamentary conference.

After three years of surveying delegates on the introduction of a charge to go towards covering the increasing venue and catering costs at Parliament House, a modest charge will be introduced to cover some of these costs and the additional dinner and breakfast events which are part of the 2009 conference. Delegates can sign up for all or any of the program of events.

MEDIA Enquiries:

Media are encouraged to contact us if they are planning on attending part or all of the event. A media kit, with all presenter biographies, abstracts, backgrounders and press releases will be available at the conference. To pre-arrange interviews or for other media enquiries, contact Cathy Reade, coordinator - Public Awareness, The Crawford Fund, telephone 0413 575 934 or email cathy.ream@ crawfordfund.org

Keynote Speakers

In addition to the Minister for Foreign Affairs, The Hon Stephen Smith MP, whom we hope to have in our program, and the Parliamentary Secretary for International Development Assistance, The Hon Bob McMullan MP, other keynote speakers include:

Dr Marco Ferroni, a Swiss national, is an expert in international agriculture and sustainability issues. Marco Ferroni joined the Syngenta Foundation as its Executive Director in 2008, after a career in multilateral institutions and government. Before joining the Foundation, Ferroni worked at the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) and the World Bank in Washington DC. As a Deputy Manager of the Sustainable Development Department of the IDB, he had responsibility for regional sector policy and technical support to the Bank's country departments. As the Principal Officer in the Bank's Office of Evaluation and Oversight, he directed evaluation studies that assessed the relevance, performance and results of Bank strategies and investments. As a senior advisor at the World Bank, he advised on donor relations and directed work on international public goods and their role in foreign aid and international affairs. Ferroni holds a doctoral degree in agricultural economics from Cornell University.

Professor Philip Pardey, an Australian native, is Professor of Science and Technology Policy in the Department of Applied Economics at the University of Minnesota and director of the University's International Science and Technology Practice and Policy (InSTePP) center. Previously he was a senior research fellow at the International Food Policy Research Institute, Washington DC where he led the Institute's Science and Technology Policy Program. He is a Fellow of the American Agricultural Economics Association and a Distinguished Fellow and President-Elect of the Australian Agricultural and Resource Economics Society. His research deals with the finance and conduct of R&D globally, methods for assessing the economic impacts of research, and the economic and policy (especially intellectual property) aspects of genetic resources and the biosciences.

Dr Prabhu Pingali, an Indian national, is Head of Agricultural Policy and Statistics, Agriculture Development Division, Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation. Formerly Director of the Agricultural and Development Economics Division of the Food and Agriculture Organization, United Nations, from 2002-2007. Pingali was elected to the US National Academy of Sciences as a Foreign Fellow in May 2007. He was the President of the International Association of Agricultural Economists from 2003-2006. He was elected Fellow of the American Agricultural Economics Association in 2006. Also in 2006, he was appointed to the U.S. National Academies Round Table on Sustainability. He co-chaired the Millennium Ecosystem Assessment Panel's working group on Future Scenarios. Pingali has over 25 years of experience in analyzing food, agriculture and development policy in Asia, Africa and Latin America. He earned a PhD in Economics from North Carolina State University in 1982.

Dr Namanga Ngongi joined the Alliance for a Green Revolution in Africa (AGRA) as its President in November 2007. He has extensive experience in agriculture and management of international organizations. He worked in Cameroon as an Extension Officer and deputy head of projects in the ministry of agriculture before being assigned in 1980 as Representative to the UN food agencies in Rome. He joined the World Food Program in 1984 and became Deputy Executive Director in 1994. In 2001 he was appointed Special Representative of the UN Secretary General to the Democratic Republic of Congo, and led the peace keeping mission for two years. He helped put together the transitional government. Dr Ngongi retired from the UN in 2003. Ngongi obtained a BS in agriculture from the California State Polytechnic University in 1968, and MS (1973) and PhD (1976) degrees, from Cornell University.
