

CRAWFORD FUND FOR FOOD SECURITY STUDENT AWARDS

Applications are invited from students in Australian universities interested in gaining expertise and experience in international agricultural research.

The deadline for online applications is close of business on Tuesday, 12 May 2026.

This note is intended to assist students with general background information and with the online application process.

OVERVIEW

The Crawford Fund For Food Security is an Australian non-government organisation that encourages greater recognition in Australia of the importance of international agricultural research, development and training for food and nutrition security. We also have a NextGen program to encourage the next generation of researchers in their studies and careers.

To promote active engagement in agricultural research for food and nutrition security, the Crawford Fund Committees are offering competitive research funding awards for tertiary students.

The purpose of the Crawford Fund Student Awards is to facilitate active student participation in projects to help them gain valuable experience and expertise in international agricultural research.

We encourage you to look at the webpage for the committee responsible for the State/Territory in which your institution is based and to make contact with the relevant coordinator. The coordinator of the Crawford Fund Committee that will consider your application is available to assist you with any further clarification you may need after reading this background document. Their contact details are on page 3.

The committees in each State/Territory have differing requirements related to the stage of applicants' studies, their citizenship/residency status and the level of funding available. Please see the table on page 3.

While some committees fund undergraduate students through these student awards, the Crawford Fund Hensell Awards are specifically for undergraduate students and are also currently open and available to students in all States/Territories – please see more details here.

YOUR SAFETY IS PARAMOUNT

Travelling in low and middle income (developing) countries can be complex. Your health and safety is paramount to us. In the application process you will be asked to provide details of the arrangements and strategies you have planned to ensure your health and safety. We would like to see from your application that you have an appreciation of the health and travel safety issues that may arise, and have strategies in place to address them. You must abide by your university's requirements in regards to travel and safety and have adequate travel insurance cover in place. In the application form, you will be asked if you have checked and are complying with the requirements of your institution as well as DFAT Travel advice (see the SmartTraveller site).

THE APPLICANT

Applicants must already be enrolled at a recognised tertiary institute in Australia and engaged in a relevant level of study in a biophysical or socio-economic aspect of agriculture, animal production, fisheries, forestry, natural resource management or food or nutrition security. Please see the table on page 3 to check if you are at a sufficiently senior level of study in your degree for awards in your State/Territory.

THE AWARDS

These awards are designed to facilitate novel engagement by the students with agricultural research and development assistance projects to be undertaken in overseas countries where the students intend to work and gain experience. The projects with which you plan to link can be governmental, international or multilateral, (e.g. the Australian Centre for International Agricultural Research (ACIAR) or any of the international agricultural research centers in the CGIAR or AIRCA, universities, FAO), or non-governmental or commercial (e.g. seed or R&D company).

The purpose of the awards is to allow you to undertake additional research or project activities that would not otherwise be possible, rather than for ongoing postgraduate research projects already in place. Funding to attend research conferences overseas will not ordinarily be considered.

If you are unsure about how to connect to a project or organisation on which to focus your project application, our advice is, in the first instance, to reach out to the Crawford Fund Coordinator in the State/Territory your university is based in. You could also identify staff at your university who are already involved in international agriculture for development associated with ACIAR or any of the international agricultural research centers in the CGIAR or AIRCA. Another strategy is to search on the ACIAR website for projects associated with your area of interest, or for projects in which your university is engaged.

Please note that the application is for travel that would be undertaken after receipt of the award and not already completed or partly underway.

HOW TO APPLY

Applicants need to complete an online application form and outline what novel research or project activity the award would allow them to undertake, how that would augment and add value, and what benefits would emerge from the experience.

Proposals that can clearly demonstrate how the award will also deliver benefit to their State/Territory will have a clear advantage. This could be through stronger linkages in research areas of interest to industry, access to technical knowledge of local interest, or knowledge that will help foster commercial engagement. Proposals will only be considered if they include all required attachments, explained below.

AWARD DECISIONS

The decisions by the State/Territory Committees on successful applications are final and no further avenues for appeal or consideration are available.

REPORTING REQUIREMENTS

Awardees will need to provide a written report to the funding Committee describing what they achieved through their award activity – more details are provided in a separate note to successful applicants. It is expected the report will be the basis of some public awareness activities, including a web blog used in our social media outreach.

Our Northern Territory and Queensland Committees may also offer awardees a Crawford Fund Conference Scholarship to attend the Crawford Fund Annual Conference in Canberra, in which case a separate report relating to attendance at the Conference will also be required.

NOTES - to facilitate completion of the online form

Before you begin

The short online application form will require you to attach a brief CV, a budget outline for your activities, the signatures of, or a supporting note from, the two Authorised Officers approving your application (see 4. Approvals), and details of at least one referee (as per 5. Referees). Your health and safety is paramount to us so you will be asked to provide details of the arrangements for this purpose too.

1.	Your details This section of the form is straightforward, and includes questions about nationality, residency status, social media handles (if any) and asks for your Curriculum Vitae to be attached.
2.	Your supporting university details Please indicate your degree, university, enrolment details etc.
3.	The host project or activity to which the applicant proposes to link The project to which the applicant proposes to link their award travel and engagement can be governmental (e.g. university, ACIAR, FAO), non-governmental (NGO) or commercial (e.g. seed company). Provide details of the project or activity to which you plan to link your trip (who is conducting it, who is funding it, where it is based, what are its main objectives including name and ID number if available from the host). Funding to attend research conferences overseas will not ordinarily be considered.
4.	The proposal Provide details of your proposal: what new research or project activity do you propose to do if you are successful in obtaining an award? Describe how you propose to link with the host project and describe how that matches the objectives of the Crawford Fund – that is, provide clear justification as to why you think the Crawford Fund should support your proposal. While international agricultural research is designed to assist the host country where it is conducted, effective projects are of mutual benefit to the home country. Proposals that can clearly demonstrate benefit to your State/Territory (e.g. through stronger linkages in research areas of clear interest to industry, access to technical knowledge of local interest, or knowledge that will help foster commercial engagement) will have a clear advantage.
5.	Health and safety We expect you to check on and comply with the health and safety requirements of your institution for travelling to the country in your visit. We expect you to check on and comply with the DFAT Travel advice for your intended visit (see the SmartTraveller site). Please identify what you consider the key health and safety issues that may arise in the country you are visiting, and the arrangements and strategies you have planned to ensure your health and safety. Please include details of your OHS (Operational Health and Safety) plans and the support being provided by the Host Institute (e.g. university) or the Host Country Project or Activity. Please ensure this includes insurance cover. You must take out adequate individual insurance cover or be covered by your institution; the Crawford Fund will not be liable.
6.	The budget – template available here Award funds can be used for airfares and other travel costs, accommodation and subsistence, and/or operational research costs. These awards can vary in amount but will generally be up to $5,000. Contact the Coordinator in your State or Territory to find out more details on the awards in your State/Territory. The Crawford Fund support may be used to augment, but not substitute for, support from other sources. Provide brief details of cash and in-kind support available from other sources to support your proposal.
7.	Approvals Approvals are required from Authorised Officers representing both the Host University where the applicant is enrolled, and the Host Country Project or Activity with which the applicant proposes to link. You may find it easier to have the Officer provide a note of support to upload to the application form, than to contribute and provide a signature to upload.
8.	Referees The Authorised Officers in Section 7 may also act as Academic Referees for the applicant or the applicant may wish to nominate other referee(s).
